A reasoning that shows that a theorem is true or false, using theorems and principles that are already deemed true