

Proofs are algebraic ways to show that a theorem about a mathematical concept holds to be true, regardless of external factors